By buying in large quantities, and for cash, we are enabled to apportion a greater value to our patrons than others, as one's hands, and are warranted perfect in every form.

Those who regard a prompt reply to their orders will be sure and send, as their patronage, as the central location of New York City, with its many diverging means of transportation, give us unrivalled advantages in forwarding to the most distant points. The business arrangements of our Establishment have been so thoroughly perfected, that orders received by the evening mail, the next morning are on their way to their destination, and no orders are delayed over twenty-four hours from the time of their receipt.

SAFETY:
We take the risk of all loss through the mail, if the directions are followed as in Catalogue, which is not done by other GIFT BOOK HOUSES. Money sent in the form of draft payable to our order, or letters inclosing funds, if registered according to law, are insured a safe return.

In ordering books, the title, in black letters only, should be used. The writing should be plain, and the Name, Post-office, County, and State should be distinct to avoid mistake.

The Kentucky Campaign.

The first number of the Campaign, containing 32 pages, 8 vo., will be ready for mailing on Tuesday morning. It will be published weekly during the Presidential canvass.—Terms 50 cents—subscriptions received at this office and by agents in different parts of the State. It has already several thousand subscribers and we trust its circulation will run up to ten thousand during the coming week.

Mr. Messrs. Talbot and Durham, of Boyle, M. R. Hurdin, J. B. Beck, Hon. J. W. Stevenson, and Hon. W. E. Sims, all urged me to let them use my name before the Convention for the purpose of enabling them to give me the nomination by a resolution or by acclamation.

The gentlemen to whom I have referred did not say one word to me about a ballot, for I remarked to Durham, that if they should vote down a resolution declaring me the unanimous choice of the Convention, that they would not give me the nomination at all; and I stated that I would not abide by the Convention except upon the terms these gentlemen had proposed to me, as an inducement to permit my name to be used before the Convention.—Col. Bolling's Card, No. 2.

Thus we have it from Col. Bolling's own hand that he told Talbot, Durham, and others that he would "abide by the Convention" if he could get the nomination. That's some admission from the "Independent," and after it is fairly understood we should like to know from what faction or fraction he expects any aid and comfort in the August election? Not from the Know-Nothings, for they have a chosen nominee in the person of the Chickasaw Ambassador—not from the Breckinridge Democracy, for he is a bolter from their Convention—nor from the Douglas wing, for he admits a willingness to have accepted a nomination upon the anti-Douglas platform. If the Colonel has no claims upon the Lincolns growing out of an old emancipation vote which he is said to have given, then verily he has no friends among the political parties in Kentucky.

In the absence of any general expression of sentiment since the Convention which nominated my predecessor, I appeal to the people of Kentucky for their support, and will respectfully bow to their decision.

Col. Bolling submitted his claims to the Convention which nominated Revill but failed to vote for that gentleman in 1858. He permitted his friends to bring his name before the last Convention and, failing to get the nomination, bolted. The question recurs to us now whether he will abide the decision of the people on the 6th prox. if he can find any way to accomplish another bolt. Who will answer for him.

Non-Intervention.

The advocates of Douglas allege, says the Maysville Express, that he adheres to the Democratic principle of Congressional non-intervention in the question of slavery in the Territories, as set forth in the Cincinnati platform, while Breckinridge and Lane have abandoned and are opposing it. This is an untrue and deceptive representation of the issue between them.

Breckinridge and Lane and the party they represent adhere to Congressional non-intervention—to the policy of leaving the settlement of the slavery question to the people of the Territories. They stand, on that question, precisely where they did in '56. The issue between them and Douglas is not on that question at all; but upon the new position of Douglas, taken since '56, that a Territorial legislature may abolish slavery, notwithstanding the decision of the Supreme Court that the Constitution prohibits such an exercise of power. The real issue is whether, the Constitution shall be respected and obeyed; whether the decisions of the Supreme Court shall be regarded; whether Southern men shall be stripped of a constitutional right, in defiance of the Constitution of their country, as solemnly expounded by that tribunal which the Constitution itself established, as its own interpreter.

Many well-meaning Democrats have been deceived by this representation that non-intervention is the question at issue between Breckinridge and Douglas. But they cannot be deceived any longer. The positions of the candidates are too well defined. Douglas is for stripping Southern men of their constitutional right to hold slaves in a Territory before it becomes a State—Breckinridge is opposed to it, and contends that the Constitution shall be obeyed and the rights guaranteed by it respected—this is the issue between them.

LOOK OUT, DEMOCRATS.—Nearly every Know-Nothing you come across is arguing earnestly for Douglas. Don't be caught by these wolves in sheep's clothing. They would argue equally as strongly for the Devil if he was a bolter from Democracy.

Every Democrat, who supports Breckinridge and Lane, has the proud satisfaction of knowing that he is right—that he is standing on a correct platform—that his candidates are worthy of his support—and that he will not be ashamed of his position.

Col. R. R. Bolling.
The Democratic press of the State are handling the "Independent candidate" without gloves. We select some specimen notices. The Lexington Statesman gives the Colonel a dig in the short ribs in this fashion:

Mr. Bolling justifies this betrayal of his friends and violation of his pledges upon two grounds: 1st, that he was assured of the nomination; and 2d, that the Convention proved to be the representative of but a fraction of the party. To the last pretext, we assure that the character of the Convention was as fully developed at the time Bolling authorized Judge Moore to pledge him, as it was when the above card was penned. The first pretext is too silly for serious reply. He thought he would be nominated, but was not; hence he is not bound to acquiesce. Had he been, all would, in his opinion, have been fair; but as he lost, he sets up that result as conclusive proof of fraud.

Having thus violated his solemn pledge, betrayed his best friends and become the dupe and obedient tool of designing politicians, Mr. Bolling was so prostrated himself that he can not even wreak the vengeance which alone can now impel him. Men of all parties who respect manly dealing and despise low cunning and treachery, will spurn his appeals with scorn. The leaders of the Bell and Douglas factions may attempt to use him for a temporary purpose, but in less than three weeks he will be found utterly worthless to all parties and factions.

The Harrodsburg Press lathers the "Independent" in this style:

It happens will be well to state to the people of Kentucky a few facts in regard to Dick Bolling, who was recently a candidate before the Democratic State Convention for Clerk of the Court of Appeals, and being defeated by one of the best Clerks and cleverest gentlemen in Kentucky, has bolted the Convention, and now proposes to run as an independent candidate. We have been heretofore rather partial to Dick Bolling, but his recent conduct estranges us from him—further as a candidate for public office he has forfeited all claim to any consideration from any party. The case of Dick Bolling is a peculiar one, and as a specimen of ingratitude to friends and of treachery to his party, has hardly if ever been equaled by any man who ever aspired to office. We are ashamed of him, and however cordially we may have in times past taken hold of his hand and were willing to help him to office, we could not now meet him without looking upon him with great contempt as an office seeker.

The Paducah Herald has a few encouraging remarks on the same subject:

BARGAIN AND SALE.—It is very shrewdly suspected by some persons, that the Pope fears about Frankfort have brought up R. R. Bolling to make the race for Clerk of the Court of Appeals, with the hope that he may carry off enough Democratic votes to enable Gen. Chickasaw Combs to slip into the office. We do not make the charge, but if Bolling should take about 10,000 votes from the Democratic party—and Combs should be elected—and Bolling is appointed Deputy Clerk at a salary of $3000 per year—would it not be very extraordinary?

If Dick Bolling is not to be made Deputy by Combs, why is he an independent candidate?

Col. Noble is also responsible for what follows:

A BOLTER.—Mr. R. R. Bolling has bolted the nomination of the State Convention, at Frankfort, and has declared himself an "Independent candidate for Clerk of the Court of Appeals."

He went before the Convention pledged to abide its decision, and received a large vote, and now he has forfeited his pledged word, proved recreant to honor, and bolts the nomination.

His course is infamous, and we hope will receive the rebuke of all honorable men.

The Louisville Democrat supports him, and he hopes to receive the vote of the friends of Douglas; but he will be mistaken. They will not sustain so dirty a fellow.

John Bell's Record.

In 1837 John Bell voted with John Q. Adams and his anti-slavery associates in the house, against a motion made to prevent an attack on slavery in the States by Slade, of Vermont.

In 1840 John Bell voted with the anti-slavery men in the house, against the 21st rule, rejecting Abolition petitions.

In 1844 John Bell opposed the annexation of Texas, a slave State.

In 1850 John Bell voted with the free-soilers in the Senate, against the Utah bill, which rejected the Wilmot Proviso, and conceded the right of the people, in the formation of a state constitution, to adopt or reject slavery.

In 1854 John Bell voted with the free-soilers in the Senate, against the Kansas Nebraska act, which embodied the same principle—the right of the people to establish, or abolish the institution of slavery.

In 1858 John Bell voted with the free-soilers in the Senate against the admission of Kansas with a constitution recognizing slavery.

Thus, through a period of 20 years, John Bell, on all occasions, has been found acting with Northern opponents of slavery against his own section.

This will do for the present. We shall have occasion hereafter to give his record in detail.

Thos. B. Farn, Assistant Elector for Franklin county, will address the citizens at the following places:

Bridgeport, Wednesday, August 1st.
Peak's Mill, Thursday, August 2d.
Speaking to commence each day at 2 o'clock.

Messrs. S. I. M. Major and Thos. B. Monroe, Jr., propose to publish a paper at Frankfort, to be called the "Kentucky Campaign," intended to do service during the Presidential canvass. As the more light the people have placed before them the better able will they be to vote understandingly, we hope the Campaign will attain a wide circulation. The following resolution in regard to it was offered at the late Democratic State Convention by Hon. H. C. Burnett, and adopted.

Resolved, That the delegates here present from the several counties be strongly recommended to subscribe for not less than one hundred copies of the "Kentucky Campaign," to be forwarded to the chairman of each county committee; and that the several district delegates be recommended to subscribe for an equal number to be forwarded to the chairman of the district committee.

The Democracy of Mississippi have endorsed the ticket of Breckinridge and Lane with a degree of enthusiasm never before witnessed in the political contests of the State.

Glorious old Caldwell county had a Breckinridge nomination meeting on Monday last week, at which Col. Wm. Bradley the gallant old war horse of Democracy made a magnificent speech in favor of the true Democratic ticket.—Paducah Herald.

[Correspondence of the Yeoman.]
Letter from Campbell County.
CAMPBELL COUNTY, July 21st, 1860.

Mr. Editor: This has truly been a great day for the National Democracy of "Old Campbell." A very short notice having been given that a meeting would be held at Alexandria, today, for the purpose of ratifying the nomination of Breckinridge and Lane, notwithstanding the heavy rain during the day, at 1 o'clock, the time designated for the meeting, crowds of the true Constitutional Democrats came pouring in, until our large and capacious court-house was filled to overflowing, and numbers were unable to get in the house. Such was the enthusiasm, that numbers came from the remote parts of the county through the rain, to show their devotion to the National Democracy, the Constitution, the Union, and more particularly to our gallant standard-bearers, Breckinridge and Lane. The demonstration of today showed to the followers of Douglas and squatter sovereignty, that the great body of the Democracy of Campbell will be on the side of Constitutional rights and the equality of the States in November next, and no mistake. It was a most gratifying sight to see so many of the old veterans of the party, who have been the bone and sinew of the party, come forward and signify their determination to support in this great contest, John C. Breckinridge, the people's favorite, and one of Kentucky's most gifted sons. A beautiful hickory pole, some 90 feet high, was raised in honor of our nominees.

The Hon. John W. Stevenson and Col. Wm. E. Arthur were present and made most powerful speeches. I shall not attempt to give you even the substance of their remarks. I could not in a letter of the length of this do them justice. Both these gentlemen have heretofore won for themselves high reputations as public speakers, and have always been great favorites with the Democracy of Kentucky; and I can say for myself, and for every one I heard speak of their efforts on this occasion, that they never in their whole career (brilliant as it has been) acquired themselves with more honor. Their arguments were clear, logical, and conclusive; and when the names of Breckinridge and Lane were alluded to, the utmost enthusiasm prevailed, and from the beginning to the end of their speeches, round after round of applause went up from the assembled multitude. Many who had heretofore been for Douglas, declared themselves for the National Democracy for Breckinridge and the Union.

The demonstration and speeches sent a bomb shell into the camp of the squatters, that will do them irreparable injury.

NATIONAL DEMOCRAT.

Pike County.
PIKE COUNTY, Ky., July 10, 1860.

Editors Kentucky Yeoman: GENTLEMEN: Last Saturday the Democracy of Pike and Floyd counties opened the canvass by raising a pole and Breckinridge and Lane flag, which is the first in our county. We had a goodly number of the Democracy in attendance, and they were unanimous and enthusiastic for Breckinridge and Lane. The pole and flag was raised at the store of A. W. Hatcher. The prospects are flattering for our ticket. Yours, C.

Straws Show how the Wind Blows.
The following special dispatch was received here last evening, from one of the most reliable gentlemen in Lexington:

LEXINGTON, July 24, 1860.
Editors Louisville Courier: Five thousand dollars were staked here, to-day, by a Scott county gentleman, that Breckinridge would carry Kentucky. Louisville gentlemen were the takers. Old Scott offered five thousand dollars more, but it was not taken.

And Still Another.

The following dispatch, from Scott county, speaks for itself. Oppositionists had made arrangements to "clean out" the old Eighth; and armed and equipped, they invaded the doomed district. They went for wool and got shorn. Their courage, like that of Bob Acres, oozed out at their fingers' ends. They bet five thousand dollars in Lexington; but refusing more offers there, they will not bet against less than 5,000 majority in Scott.

GEORGETOWN, July 24, 1860.
Editors Louisville Courier: The Bell and Douglas men here won't bet on Kentucky against Breckinridge, unless they are given five thousand majority.

Meeting of the Commissioners of the Institution for Feeble-Minded Children.
Present, R. W. Scott, President; Messrs. J. G. Leach, J. M. Lancaster, R. C. Anderson, Jno. Vaughan, and Jno. Rodman.
Mr. Leach offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the Superintendent be authorized to expend a sum, not exceeding $250, in procuring well water, wherever he deems it most expedient, and that the said sum be paid out of the fund for the purchase of land, buildings, and improvement.

On motion of Mr. Lancaster, it was ordered that the location of the main building to be erected be changed to the spot now occupied by the stable, it being the highest ground and the most eligible spot for its site.

On motion of Mr. Lancaster, it was ordered that the Superintendent be authorized to have a topographical survey of the site for the building to be erected made, and forward the same to the architect, and that he draw on the treasurer of the board for the cost of it.

On motion of Mr. Lancaster, ordered that $20 be allowed the matron of the institution to cover her traveling expenses from Philadelphia, and that the treasurer pay the amount.

On motion of Mr. Leach, it was ordered that the previous order of the board, fixing the salary of teachers at $150 be rescinded, and that the salaries now be fixed at a sum not exceeding $250.

A code of laws was presented by Dr. Rodman, the Superintendent, to the board, and was referred to the Executive Committee and Superintendent, to be reported on at the next meeting of the board.

On motion, Mr. Leach's traveling expenses were allowed.

Board adjourned.

R. W. SCOTT, President.

Lines Suggested on Visiting the Grave of Boone, at the Frankfort Cemetery.

BY FLORA.
As I musingly stood on Kentucky's high shore,
So high on her cliffs that far, far below,
Curled the blue smoke and the river swept like a gleam
Of pure light through the hills to Ohio's broad stream.
I thought of those days when, fearless and lone,
Boone wandered to this spot, all weary and worn.
With the eye of a seer, he calmly surveyed
The strange land mapped before him with heart undimmed.
Who can tell, at that moment, the wild rush of thought
That flooded his mind with sad feelings unsought?
Like a hero and man, he could think with regret
Of the friends left behind him he could not forget,
Of the land all untrod by the white man before,
Of the rocks and high cliffs where the eagle might soar.
And be proud of her plight. Of his own future fame,
When a nation unborn should revere his loved name.

Or perhaps of the kindred who had fallen in strife,
To rescue the land from the gun and the knife.
Thoughts like these may have poured o'er his brain;
But a man of his mould was not born to complain.
Far away lay before him Kentucky's fair land,
Spreading onward and on to Ohio's bright strand,
And far back behind him to Cumberland's wild shore,
Where a brother he had buried all weeping in gore.

All around was a land, as if wrought by the spell
Of spirit, where in peace and bliss they might dwell;
When at last, he might murmur, I have closed this lone life.

May I calmly repose on this stream with my wife,
Who is far, far away now, but still time is no more.
May we rest in Kentucky's high shore,
And thus it is, 'neath this cliff the bright river will flow.

Far above, full of pride, springs the white sycamore.
The green cedars are near on the shores rocky crest.
Hallowed spot, it is here our hero should rest.

[From the New York Herald.]
A New View of the Presidential Campaign.

We publish in another part of this morning's Herald a carefully written and well reasoned article from the oldest Democratic journal in Connecticut—the Hartford Times. The theory of this article is strikingly new to that which has been put forward in these columns, and is one which cannot fail to recommend itself to every man of common sense.

In the first place it is assumed that the election lies between the Democracy and the Republicans. Mr. Houston and Mr. Bell are very good men, and would be capital Presidents, no doubt, but they have no party, and their nomination has failed to meet with any response from the popular heart. The Democratic party has been rent in twain by causes which are of no significance in this connection. Whether the one platform or the other is the proper one for the Democracy to stand upon, matters very little. The difference is only an abstract one, and platforms are at the best very trashy things, which few people understand, and no one cares a snap of his finger about. And, above all, we are not just now addressing the Democracy only. We speak to the conservative masses in the Central States, eight or nine hundred thousand voters who hold the balance of power in the election, and who always throw their vote on the side of law, order, peace, tranquility and equal rights for all the States.

Many of these men have personal preferences for Mr. Douglas, others for Mr. Bell. They all agree in opposing Mr. Lincoln. There is nothing to be said against Mr. Douglas; on the contrary, there is much to be advanced in his favor. But he has never been elected, and has never been elected by his own party in all the States where it is predominant, and is only supported by a minority in the republican or doubtful States. Even the State of Illinois is not by any means certain for his favorite son; and that being the case, his affairs are as desperate as those of the First Napoleon when he was a way from Russia. Mr. Bell is in quite as bad a way. As to the position of the Democratic masses, we believe that the firm attitude of the Breckinridge men in the South, the falling away of the few prominent men in that section who adhered to Douglas up to the last moment, together with the vigorous manner in which the Breckinridge campaign opened in New York city, have created a reaction in the Northern and Central States, the effect of which will be to leave Mr. Douglas far behind in the race, and help Mr. Breckinridge in a degree corresponding to the injury inflicted upon his opponent. So far as the Democratic party organization is concerned, the centre of power lies in the Southern States, because the party is more numerous in a certain number of electoral votes, while in the North they are liable to be beaten in every State. The Democracy gravitates naturally towards the centre of power, and the Northern section of the party, after waiting a short time to see if the mountain would come to Mahomet, have concluded, from all appearances, that if anything is to be done Mahomet must go to the mountain; and they are preparing to go over, horse, foot, and dragons to the Breckinridge wing of the party.

This being the actual state of the case, the choice of the people is narrowed down to Lincoln and Breckinridge, the only candidates who represent electoral votes, or the other must be elected, if there is any choice by the people, and the conservative voters of the North should refrain from throwing away their votes and shirking the responsibility which the present position of political affairs places upon their shoulders. They have to choose between the Vice President, whose political record is familiar to every one, and the representative of the electricity which has been kindled in the minds of the people by the success of John Brown to the richly deserved gallows. If the merchants and mechanics and working men of the Central States wish to endorse Seward's "irrepressible conflict," Sumner's "sacred animosity," and Wendell Phillips' constitutional compact with hell," doctrine, they will vote for Lincoln; if they wish to go to the mountains, and support the vigorous effort in the Central States, Pennsylvania and New Jersey particularly.

Vote for Peters.

A strong attempt will be made to enjoin Democrats into voting for Judge Simpson, on the ground that he has not a party candidate. But let no Democrats be deceived by any such fallacious pretences. Judge Simpson is an Oppositionist, and the candidate of the Opposition party, brought out by the tacit consent of the party, and will be voted for by the Oppositionists in solid column. The Maysville Eagle, a bitter Oppositionist sheet, has his name at the head of its columns, between the names of Bell and Everett, for Breckinridge, who may be elected by vigorous effort in the Central States, Pennsylvania and New Jersey particularly.

THE CAMPAIGN

Cannot be published without a heavy outlay, and must necessarily receive such patronage now as will justify its publication. Believing such a journal important, and that we can supply the want, we submit the prospectus to our Democratic friends for their consideration.

As he spoke this last sentence, his voice made the hall ring again, and grasping at the "recognition" slanders he dashed them to his feet, and "trampled on them," as though he was crushing out their very life. The whole House was electrified, and there was a sympathetic and spontaneous movement amongst the spectators, as if to do this elevating effort—to trample out the poisonous weeds. Upon this point I had already touched upon the subjects of "The can't about Progress" and "Seeking the Presidency in a manner not to be forgotten, and in the latter case especially well to be remembered at the present time. Upon the former he said: 'We now say a word upon this question of progress. I profess to be a friend of rational progress; but I want no wild and irresponsible progress; but would say every day of the immortal principles of our forefathers. I want to progress in the line of the principles of our Fathers; I want a steady and rational advance—not beyond the limits of the Federal Constitution—but I am afraid that such progress as is now talked of would carry us clear away from that sacred instrument. I want to progress by ameliorating the condition of the people by just, fair, and equal laws; by simplifying the forms, and justifying the operation of the Federal Government. Above all, I hope to see the Democratic party adhering to the ancient and distinguishing landmarks of its policy. There are my opinions on progress.'

Upon the charge that General Butler was a man candidate, and referring to the disapprobation of the people, the speaker said, "Candidates are wiggling for the Presidency, he said. 'What would gentlemen have? Would they have him (Gen. Butler) to roam over the country clamoring for support, and spreading his sails to every popular excitement?' General Butler has not lost his self-respect, at his house in Kentucky; he has not mingled in this Presidential strife. 'To my mind, sir, it is a noble spectacle. It is the homage he pays to the good sense and capacity of his countrymen. This course carries the military to the front, and the people, and recalls the memory of those really great men who neither sought nor declined the Presidency. The avidity with which high offices are sought, now-a-days, I regard as the worst, the very worst sign of the age, of the nation. It is the sign of corruption, extravagance, profligacy, national disgrace. I hope that the Chief Magistrate of this Union will ever be designated by the spontaneous voice of the people, and that the citizen who is honored by the public choice may deserve the honor for his services, his virtues—and his modesty.'"

While Mr Brockinridge was ever a party opponent of Henry Clay, he always entertained the most ardent admiration for the man; and improved every occasion to express it. In the speech from which the foregoing extract is quoted, he said: "I am glad that you are here, and that you are so potent to rally his clamorers than any in American history, save that of Jackson." It was this knowledge of this feeling, together with the fact that he represented the "Ashland District," that caused him to be selected by the House as its principal speaker at the funeral solemnities held in honor of that statesman. Those who were present at the funeral will never forget the noble and sublime courage on that occasion. "As a leader in a deliberative body," said he, "Mr. Clay had no equal in America. In him intellect, personal eloquence and courage united to form a character fit to command. He fired with his own enthusiasm, and controlled by his amazing will individuals and masses. No reverse could crush his spirit, nor defeat reduce him to despair. He met adversity with success, he moved to the accomplishment of his purposes with severe resolution; when defeated, he rallied his broken bands around him and from his eagle eye shot along the ranks the contagion of his own courage. Destined for a leader, he everywhere asserted his destiny. In his long and eventful life he came in contact with men of the ranks and of the Senate, and he was the first to feel the presence of a man superior to himself. In the assemblies of the people, at the bar, in the Senate—everywhere within the circle of his personal presence he assumed and maintained a position of pre-eminence. The entire absence of equivocation or disguise in all his acts was his master-key to the public heart. He never paltered in a double sense. He was as true to the ends of his opinions or purposes, in all the vicissitudes of his time, his position on the public questions was as clear as the noonday sun in a cloudless sky. Sir, standing by the grave of this great man, and considering these things, how contemptible does appear all the legerdemain of politics? What a reproach on his life is the false policy which would trifle with a great and upright general. If I were to write his eulogy, I should describe him as the highest eulogy on the stone which shall mark his resting-place, 'Here lies a man who was in the public service for fifty years and never attempted to deceive his countrymen.'"

This Breckinridge went on, and as he paid the rich tribute of his chivalric nature to his deceased friend, he seemed to have vaned his eyes. He very soon turned his eyes and his words into his country. The truth is, the natures and qualities of the two men were much alike, and it was, therefore, a natural and easy thing for Breckinridge to appreciate Clay and describe him as eloquently and truly as he did. He had but to speak from his own heart. The same remark may be made of his noble description of General Butler, "a man of great elevation, of great intelligence, of great candor and of great elevation." "He is a man pure and incorruptible, a Democrat of the Jackson temper; a statesman without guile, sir, and as a soldier, why very Bayard of his country, the Knight without fear and without reproach." Those who know Breckinridge will scarcely need to be told that the words were not empty, and that nobility was not but the reflex of his own sterling character.

The wonderful success of Mr. Breckinridge has been already referred to, simply as an existing fact, but some reference to his cause and character, and to the correlative influence of the latter upon the former, is complete in this sketch. His first election to Congress was a wonderful achievement. The District for which he was returned was the district and home of Henry Clay. It was Whig by a majority of sixteen hundred. His opponent was a man of great ability, and one of the shrewdest tacticians and ablest debaters in Kentucky. Yet, Mr. Breckinridge, beating down this heavy majority, and this strong antagonist, was elected by a majority of more than five hundred.

The result was a subject for discussion in the political arena, but it is beyond the scope of the Whig to review the elaborate and successful campaign. It convinced a resolute party to remove the District, and brought into the field Governor Letcher—an experienced campaigner—of great ability and established reputation, and altogether the most successful of the hottest kind, and as many will remember the interest and excitement spread over the whole country. But the second victory of the rising young Democrat was even more signal than the first.

Following this came the proffered mission to Spain and its modest decline. Then the spontaneous call to the Vice Presidency, then the election to the Senate, and now the deep and strong under current of popular feeling in his favor for the Presidency. Such unparalleled success—especially in our country, and for so young a man—does not of course pass without emphatic remark. It is debated sometimes in popular style, and sometimes with philosophical gravity. Some dispose of the matter in a summary way or by a single sentence, and say that the man cannot certainly be logically disproved. Others say because he is a fine, genial, high-spirited fellow; but there are hundreds of men of that character who are never heard of beyond the small circles in which they move. There are those again who refer his popularity and success to his brilliant talents, but there are many merely successful men of no special talents. It is not secure. There are still others who deduce his intellectual and political power as necessary physiological or psychological results of the blood that is in him. They argue that not only his father his grandfather, and all his kinsmen on the Breckinridge side, were men of might and high sense of honor, but that so were his ancestors on the other side. They say that the blood of the fathers of the Declaration of Independence, and coming down to the present; that his family, throughout our whole existence as a nation, has made its mark upon the politics and morals of the country; and that it is because he is sprung from such a race of men that he has run such a splendid career. But all this is wide of the mark. The source of it all is the man himself, and in the common sense of the word, the man is the possibility to account for it on any other grounds. He may be aptly described in his own words as applied to Butler and Clay, for he possesses the great qualities of both. He is a man pure and incorruptible, a Democrat of the Jackson temper, a statesman without guile—all the hereditary virtues of his race springing concealment or evasion; and in addition to these, he has the energy and courage now to form a character fit to command. If he were not such a man, he would have met with no such uninterrupted success, and had no such surprising popularity.

But few of our conventional great men bear the test of close inspection. It is a subject of common remark that nearly all of them are dwarfed into the mere mediocrity by close and familiar observation. In most cases it is essential to this that the discreditable enchantment of the "view" be Breckinridge's proof against the severest of all tests. The closer you see him the greater and better he looks. This is the experience of the people of all parties, and especially the Representatives who go annually to Washington; and when they go home—penetrating, as they do, all parts of the country—they relate to their friends and neighbors, and it becomes the fixed opinion of the people that Breckinridge is the true ground work of Breckinridge's greatness. It pervades the entire body of the Democratic party. It is in the people's hearts. No forced, but house growth, but indigenuous

The difference between it and the factitious popularity of a small clique is small; the difference is the same as the difference between the applause of paid claqueurs at a theatre, and that spontaneous, irrepressible, electric shout that goes up striking the very walls, when the hearts of the people are truly touched.

Mr. Breckinridge has been considered chiefly with reference to the causes that have centered upon him so large of public attention and favor; and not at all in his relation to the Presidency, as, in no usual sense of the term, he is, a number of delegates to the Charleston Convention have declared a marked preference for him above all others, but such expressions come from no procurements of his; they are but the simple and natural results of the high esteem in which he is held by the people. It is not necessary to show that Mr. Breckinridge is, in every respect, a character worthy to be President of the United States. If the qualifications that were regarded as essential in the Chief Magistrate in the earlier and surer days of our history are still held to be important, then he is most worthy of all that are likely to be considered at Charleston.

He presents reputation without blemish, great intellectual ability, intimate knowledge of public affairs, integrity that no man would dare approach with a corrupt or questionable proposition, and a hearty organization, controlled by that highest sense of public duty which holds right and justice to be superior to party obligations; and with all these he presents the very prime of a vigorous manhood, tempered by a judgment and discretion that thus far have been singularly free from error or fault.

There can be no doubt that, possessing these qualities as he does, Mr. Breckinridge would, as President, be governed by wise and patriotic views, and that his administration of public affairs would be so able and pure as to command respect and confidence at home and abroad. But it has so happened in late years, that Presidential candidates have been selected on very different grounds from those just mentioned. Given the present state of the country, and the conflicting interests of political speculators, and in the hot pursuit of availability, have either overlooked or sacrificed the more important requirements of the Presidency. It can hardly be expected that the Charleston Convention will be more exempt from such influences than its predecessors, whether of its own or the Republican party. But in this regard it may prove the fortunate circumstance that the subject of future congratulation for the country, that eminent statesman and the highest availability unite in the person of John C. Breckinridge. His wide-spread popularity, the hearty good will of the masses of his party, and the prestige of his unbroken success against great odds, may open the eyes of the delegates to merits they might not otherwise care to examine.

There is a genuine feeling of surprise at Mr. Breckinridge, more of itself work wonders, as it did in the "Ashland District" and at Cincinnati.

If not supported by extraordinary means, it must produce its usual effects at Charleston, and should he be nominated, the lightning flash that makes it known to the Democrats of the Union will wake a responsive shout such as has not gone up since that party since the days of Jackson.

Mitchell, who reported the following preamble and resolutions, which were adopted without a dissenting voice:

WHEREAS, The National Democratic party of the United States did, in Convention at Baltimore, on the 18th of June last, separate, mainly in consequence of a difference of opinion among the delegates as to the powers of the Territorial government upon the question of slavery in the Territories; and

AND WHEREAS, The said party did, and hereby do the same, and as one portion of said Convention nominated for President S. A. Douglas and for Vice President H. V. Johnson, and the other James C. Breckinridge for President and Gen. Joe Lane for Vice President, we, the Democracy of Merit, do hereby declare our duty to the people of Kentucky the following resolutions, expressive of our sentiments:

Resolved, That while we sincerely regret that a necessity existed in the National Convention to separate, and that the Convention did so, yet to the world that we fully endorse the action of those delegates who left the Convention which nominated for President Stephen A. Douglas, because they could not have longer remained with that Convention without compromising the

Resolved, That we most heartily indorse the platform of principles enunciated and declared by the National Democratic Convention which nominated John C. Breckinridge for President and Gen. Joe Lane for Vice President, because we recognize in that platform a just and proper regard for the constitutional rights of all sections of our glorious Union.

Resolved, That we indorse the nominations of John C. Breckinridge for President and Gen. Joe Lane for Vice President, and pledge them an earnest and zealous support.

Resolved, That we return our grateful thanks to the Convention for the honor conferred on Kentucky, by the nomination of her gifted son for the gift of the nation's Presidency.

Resolved, That we regard John C. Breckinridge and Gen. Joe Lane as the only National Democratic candidates for President and Vice President of the United States.

Resolved, That we approve the action of the 18th State Convention which met at Frankfort on the 18th instant.

Resolved, That we will give our candidate for Clerk of the Court of Appeals, Clint McClarty, a zealous support.

Resolved, That the resolutions adopted by the self styled Democratic meeting which was held at the court-house in Harrodsburg, on Saturday last, expressing a preference for S. A. Douglas over John C. Breckinridge, is not expressive of the true sentiments of the Democratic voters of Mercer county.

Resolved, That the platform of principles adopted by the Democratic Convention that nominated Breckinridge and Lane, announces the same principles contained in the resolutions passed by the Democratic Convention held in Frankfort on the 9th of January, 1860.

Resolved, That we will use our best efforts to make Mercer the banner county of the State for Breckinridge and Lane.

Resolved, That we approve the course of the Kentucky Press, and recommend that efforts be made to increase the subscription list.

Resolved, That resolutions be published in the Kentucky Press, Louisville Courier, Frankfort Yeoman, Lexington Statesman, and other Democratic papers of the State.

There being no further business on hand, the meeting adjourned.

CALDWELL COUNTY—A letter from Caldwell informs us that there is only one Douglassite in that county. On the other hand, W. H. Edmunds M. Dudley, Geo. Ingram, Col. Geo. W. Barbour J. F. Ingram, and other gentlemen of standing who have always been opposed to the Democracy have declared in favor of Breckinridge and Lane. These gentlemen are southern men, and the position they have taken excites no surprise with us. We only wonder that Caldwell has not thousands of such men who have heretofore been in the ranks of the Opposition.—Paducah Herald.

Debate Ratified at Meeting.

At a large and enthusiastic meeting of the Democracy of Pike county, held at the court house in Pikeville, on Monday, the 16th of July, (being County Court day,) the meeting was organized by calling Judge William Cecil to the Chair, and the appointment of John W. Emmert as Secretary.

Colbert Cecil (a delegate to the Democratic National Convention) explained the causes which led to the withdrawal of himself and colleagues, and defended in an able manner the party who withdrew from the contest; after which, on the motion of Mr. Rice, East, being called to the order, he addressed the meeting in a speech of some length, reviewing the platforms of the political parties, and vindicated the Breckinridge and Lane ticket from the charge of sectionalism. In conclusion, he offered several resolutions, which were unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That we approve of the call made by the Democratic Central Committee for a Convention, to be held at Frankfort, on the 18th inst., and we hereby nominate Clerk Mc. The Court of Appeals, and that we pledge to the nominee said Convention our cordial support.

Resolved, That we heartily and enthusiastically rally and indorse the platform of principles adopted by the Democratic National Convention at Baltimore; that we view them as eminently national, conservative, and a just rebuke to the sectionalism of the Douglas platform; and, eighteen, that the nominees of said Convention—"Breckinridge and Lane"—standing upon this Constitutional platform are deserving, and should receive, the support of the true Democracy throughout the Union.

Resolved, That the proceedings of this meeting be forwarded to the Yeoman for publication, and that Democratic action throughout the State be requested to publish the same.

WM. CECIL, President.
JNO. W. EMMETT, Secretary.

PERSONAL VS. PARTY NOMINATIONS FOR THE PRESIDENCY—Of the candidates in the field for the next Presidency, only two represent living party organizations. Mr. Douglas stands at the head of a ragged and broken column; Mr. Bell was nominated by a convention of fossil Whigs and broken-down Know Nothing politicians; Sam Houston's army is of the Falstaffian order, and so on through the list, up to Breckinridge and Lincoln, both of whom are backed by powerful party organizations, and have a certain amount of definite support. That Lincoln will carry the bulk of the electoral vote North is beyond peradventure. That Breckinridge will be equal to the South, amidst of no reasonable doubt. The other candidates are all mere representatives of cliques, and have no strength beyond the support of their immediate friends.—Choose then between Breckinridge and Lincoln.—N. Y. Herald.

□ Col. Wm. Bradley, of Hopkins county, a delegate to the Baltimore Convention, delivered a speech at the court house in Madisonville, on Monday of last week. We have a brief report of the speech in the Madisonville Register which we shall lay before our readers next week. The speech is a clear and true history of what occurred at Charleston and Baltimore, showing up some of the freaks of the Douglastrites in no very enviable light. Col. Bradley made a speech in this city, and one at Rock Spring in this county, giving a full and true account of the proceedings of the party at Charleston and Baltimore, and although he never announced in so many words his intention to support Breckinridge and Lane, the most careless listener knew where all the Col.'s sympathies were, and who he would support. Col. Bradley boldly announced at Madisonville his intention to support Breckinridge and Lane, the leaders of the Union National Democracy in the present campaign. — Native Rep.

Prof. Woot: These will not, Michl., Dec. 21st, 1858.

Twenty years ago, caused by a complicated chronic disease, attended with a violent fever, I was afflicted with a continual course of suffering through life having become to me a state of dependence, I have not been able to obtain strength and vigor since I have been able to do them up, in consequence of which my head has suffered extremely from cold. This induced me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and after using a two dollar bottle of the Hair Restorative about the first of August last, I have faithfully followed the directions and the bald spot is now covered with hair black and black, though short, it is also coming in all over my head. Feeling confident that another large bottle would restore it entirely and MISS GIZON, Noble Co., Indiana, Feb. 5th, 1859.

PROF. O. J. WOOD: Dear Sir,
The year 1852, while attending the State and National Law School of the State of New York, my hair, from a cause not known to me, began to fall out very rapidly, so that in the short space of six months the whole upper part of my scalp was almost entirely bereft of hair. I was obliged to wear a wig, and a wig-dor upon the side and back part of my head. Shortly after became gray, so that you will not be surprised to find my appearance as my more intimate acquaintance would not so much at first to discover the cause of the trouble. I was very anxious to find out the cause, and I at once made application to the most skillful physicians in the country, but receiving no assurance of recovery, I was obliged to resign myself, and I preferred to become reconciled to my fate, until, fortunately, in the latter part of the year 1857, your Remedy was introduced into the country. I was then informed by the most reliable Hair Restorative in use, I tried one bottle, and found to my great satisfaction that it was producing the desired effect. Since that time, I have purchased seven dollars worth of the restorative, and as a result, have a rich coat of very soft black hair, which no money can buy.

As a student of the Law, and a student and skilful in the production of so wonderful an article, I have recommended its use to many of my friends and acquaintances, and I am happy to inform you, are using it with like effect.

Very respectfully, yours,
